

A formal invitation is generally so worded that there is no mistaking its import. A wedding card is so very clear that everyone who receives one knows who sends it, who the bride is to be, who the groom is to be, where it will take place and when and all the particulars. When an invitation for an evening party comes it is about as clear as the former, and the feature of the entertainment is announced in the lower left hand corner. The time is also given, but it is the entertainment to occur before 6 o'clock that puts the recipient into a fever and makes her nervous. Especially is this true of the social function called a "tea." A week or two before the event is to take place visiting cards (usually, it is almost an unheard-of thing to receive a regularly engraved invitation to a tea) are sent out and an hour is named. It may be 3 o'clock or it may be 4 o'clock, or possibly 5 o'clock, and the one who receives it wonders if she is to go at the hour designated or if she has the privilege of going at any hour from the one named till 6 o'clock. In nearly every instance this latter is what she may do, but she is not safe in doing it every time. There have been numerous cases where the hostess has sent out cards like this and intended that her guests should be on hand at the hour and ready to sit down to a table or to small or more courses. Anyone going later delays the feast. Then it has happened that a person going promptly at the hour named expecting that it might be a "sit-down tea," has been ushered into a drawing room and had to wait for her hostess to appear, and feel that she had come too soon, and that she will have to sit there and talk to her hostess for a half hour and wait for someone else to put in an appearance. This would not be anything but a pleasure under ordinary circumstances, but she feels that she is the only stupid one of all who are asked, and she wonders how they all found it out and she did not, and then, perhaps, she finds a very little dis-trust growing, that the hostess has asked her because she was "indebted" to her for a company, and in all this wonderment she invitation would be of material benefit in almost every instance. What to Wear?

is really unhappy till some one rings the bell and very soon others come in, and she is one of many, and she thinks she was a fool for feeling as she did. Then, perhaps, she was invited in the same way very soon after, and she says to herself that she will not be caught that way a second time, and she never leaves home till 4:30, and when she arrives she finds that all are seated at "tea" (where there is no tea), and the hostess arises from her seat and bids her welcome, and she is served to the second course and misses the first entirely, and again she hates herself for being so stupid.

This does not, of course, happen to the same girl every time, and she very often goes when the rest do and does the proper thing, but once in a while she misses it and is made unhappy, and all by the fault of the entertainer. A good rule for afternoon invitations would be that when a guest is expected at a certain hour that only one hour be named, but if the guest may come at any time during the three or four hours that two hours be named, thus, "from 4 to 6 o'clock, when a hostess has a course tea ready at 4 o'clock she naturally wants all of her guests to be ready very close to that time, or some of the dainties will be ruined by waiting, so that a form for an

There is rarely an entertainment where there is not a consultation somewhere as to what shall be worn. In the family the mother and daughter, or whatever other femininity dwells within the walls, consult upon the all-important topic of wardrobe. If there chances to be but one woman in the house that makes no difference; she will go to some of her neighbors or friends and ask them what they expect to decorate in, and then there will be a comparison of notes, and perhaps when she hears what the friend is going to wear she will arrange her costume accordingly; then she will feel that she is not too much dressed, and not too little. It has happened that a woman, who is not on everyone's list, will be among those invited to a large gathering of some kind, and she will hie herself to someone who she thinks knows all about what it will be proper to wear, and asks an opinion. The trouble with the invitations is what is the matter. A card is sent out, and it is marked "informal," and the one who receives it takes it for granted that it means what it says, and that there is to be a general enjoy-ment, but no one need bother to order a carriage in order that she may wear her best gown and not soil it by contact with the dirt in the street. When she arrives at the "informal" company she is met by the hostess, who has on a white satin or a pink silk and lace and diamonds enough to stock a shop. "Informal" does not always mean informal, and it has com to be that one may go to almost any sort of a company in a ball dress with low neck and bare arms but at the "informal" company such a one is liable to meet a friend who has dressed according to the invitation. The matter of what to wear is resolved into this: "Always look your very best, no matter to what you are invited."

made plump, superfluous hair destroyed, excessive redness and birthmarks removed, your complex-ion made naturally beautiful without the use of paints, powders or cosmetics; gray hair restored to its natural color and youthful appeardyes; your skin cleared of all discolorations, freckles, tan, moth patches, liver spots, excessive redness, oiliness, shine, red nose and the various forms of eczema, acene, pimples, blackheads, roughness and, in fact, everything detrimental to beauty by Mme, M. Rema, the world's greatest Complexion Specialist, located at the Cordova Building, introducing her system of Dermatology and Beauty Culture. Mme, Rema is the only person who has solved the problem of permanent youth and beauty, of which she is a living witness. At the age of forty she looks eighteen. You will not believe it when you see her-no wrinkles, no lines and a fresh youthful complexion gives her this youthful appearnace. She is the only person in the world who can permanently remove Wrinkles and Lines from the human face and give you that youthful complexion noticeable in healthy girlhood. Mme. M. Rema's Balm of Youth (Skin nourishment and Wrinkle Eradicator) and her new instrument, Facial Beautifier, used as directed removes wrinkles and lines from the skin as readily as starch and the hot iron removes wrinkles from linen. Hundreds of ladies in this and other citles will testify to this. Is this not worth investigating? Is it not something you wish to read and hear about. Mme. M. Rema will give free short talks at her Beauty Culture Parlors every day this week. Ladies only are invited to call and see and hear this lady who defies time and trouble to leave telitale traces (wrinkles and lines) which mar the beauty and kill the youthful appearance of humanity. Mme. Rema says it is worth scores of dollars and hours of time when youthful beauty of face and form can be regained and retained at an expense not to exceed our means. A Free Test Treatment will be given to all ladies calling in the forenoon. Free short talks for ladies only in the Ladies can be successfully treated by mail by sending this advertisement and 6 cents postage and receive the Madame's valuable book, "Beauty Culture," free.
